

Halton-Hamilton Source Protection Committee

Emily Milligan
General Public Representative

Emily Milligan represents the interests of the general public on the Halton-Hamilton Source Protection Committee. Ms. Milligan is a resident of Burlington and currently works in Telecommunications as a Product Owner. She obtained her Bachelor of Science degree in Chemistry with Co-op from the University of Waterloo. Her diverse background in hydrology, physiochemical aspects of natural waters, and human dimensions of natural hazards, coupled with her expertise in geography and Earth science disciplines, position her to comprehend the complexities of environmental processes, geophysical hazards, and land use management. Emily's educational foundation and technical acumen enable her to navigate the intricate issues and reports pertinent to the Halton-Hamilton Source Protection Committee. Emily's dual capacity as a professional and a representative of the general public ensures that her insights will not only contribute to shaping policy but also enhance community outreach efforts.
